Times News Services Both Air Canada and CP Air announced plans

today to slash fares by up to 35 per cent for excursion trips in off-peak periods to stimulate travel within Canada.

Both airlines subject to federal government approval, will introduce discounts on long - haul and short-haul flights within Canada.

The companies also will boost current 20 per cent discounts on standby youth fares to 50 per cent below normal economy fares. All reductions will come into effect Sept. 8.

An Air Canada spokesman in Montreal said current economic conditions have depressed airline traffic levels throughout the world.

The new excursion packages were an attempt to generate an additional $500 million in revenues during the normally slow fall and winter periods, in view of this year's seven per cent drop-off from 1974 in summer traffic levels, northern Portugal appeared close to a military rebellion today against Premier Vasco Goncalves and his pro-Communist policies.

The central government rashed more left-wing troops loyal to the Lisbon regime to Porto in an apparent attempt to head off the crisis.

An accelerating wave of vi-olence swept through the north, central and eastern regions of the country and mili-tary officers in the north issued a petition calling for creation of a multi-party state Goncalves concept.

In Fafe, Communists who killed one demonstrator and wounded five others barricad-ed themselves in their head-quarters in that northern town, as anti-Communist crowds gathered without police or military interference.

It's Not Getting Better

can solve any problem with legislation the New Democratic Party administration of Premier Dave Barrett established rent controls in the spring of 1974, over the objections of the entire opposition in the legislature -and - (behind closed doors) a significant section of the NDP caucus as well.

The argument against rent controls, in the main, was: Why single out rents? When the prices of so many other necessaries of life are rising through the roof, why single out one sector?

No one needed convincing that rental accommodation in B.C. was in a state of severe crisis a year ago. Sometimes a crisis responds to shock treatment, and the controls were supported in this corner as "a fair enough temporary measure." But the point is that more than a year later, rental accommodation is still in a state of crisis. Vacancy rates are still just above zero in the metropolitan areas where rental accommodation is needed most. Most investment money that might have gone into anartment blocks is going into condominium projects that produce high, quick returns.

Many of the sordid things predicted by rent control's more pessimistic opponents have happened - as even Rentalsman Barrie Clarke candidly admits - "key money" of several hundred dollars paid to landlords to obtain apartments, under-the-table deals to pay so much extra above the rent-controlled monthly limit, honest smalltime landlords caught in the inflex-"ible 10.6 per cent limit designed for the big corporate landlords, thousands living in "third class" slum housing with no hope of renting anything better.

The worst aspect of the rental mess, however, is the govern-freeze. It doesn't appear to be very selective. Most departments complain of severe cufbacks in spending, from those who could do with a trimming of the fat and waste to those where there's nothing but bone left.

A cynic might say that the provincial government passed a law to mollify public opinion, then granted enough money for only an inferior job of administering it. Whatever interpretation of the government's action, the spending and hiring freeze has hit the rentalsman's office very hard. Promised 78 staff, Clarke now has just 45 to handle the 1,500 complaints that pour in each working day. Backlogs and delays grow larger and longer each day.

Perhaps the budgetary freeze on the rentalsman's office could be understood if the government had some sort of program waiting in the wings to replace rent controls. But aside from a task force study of rental accommodation in B.C. (which doubtless will be studied by

In its belief that governments ment's across-the-board budget lyzed by other consultants after that) and hints from the attorneygeneral that separate provincial zones with different rent limits may be established, the indicationsare that the government doesn't know what to do.

> The housing department is trying to help, but its effort is a drop in the bucket compared to the need. Direct rent subsidies to all tenants were tried for one year, then switched to a system of tax credits which no one will benefit from until mid-1976. The one major attack on the problem the rentalsman and the system of rent controls - is held back on a short leash with a shrivelled bud-

The problem has survived the shock treatment of a year ago quite nicely, and the unco-ordinated collection of patent medicines prescribed so far haven't fazed it either. What is lacking is a longterm regimen of incentives and prods for the crisis to be cured.

A union for prisoners? In international women's year, when a royal commission recommends establishment of a bill of rights for kids, when almost every other minority group has organized, it was inevitable.

While the union's first activity, six-day sit-down "strike" at the B.C. penitentiary and Matsqui medium security prison, seems to have made no impression at all on the screws, the Gompers and Meanys and Len Guys behind bars should persevere.

Picture the scene a few years down the road ...

Citizens will refuse to be relieved of their wallets except by union members in good standing, the term "hot" will acquire new meanings, mail bags and licence plates will require the union label, banks and stores with unfair burglar alarms will be picketed. Crime, the last bastion of untrammelled free enterprise, had to fall sooner or later to organization.

, OTTAWA — A year of war has cost Canada $90 million. The great struggle in which many Canadians already have laid down their lives is calling also for great financial sacrifices. It is costing Canada, in fact, $300,000 a day. Figuring this out more finely, it will be apparent that Canadians are going down into their pockets to pay the expenses of the present struggle at the rate of nearly $15,000 an hour, or about $240 a minute. The big expenses are for the equipment and upkeep of the men at home and the troops in England and at the front. Their salaries in fact cost $100,000 a day.

Parliament: Drift and Lassitude

OTTAWA - A few end-of-school-term okes, some hand-shakes and "see va's" MPs have left parliament to the 5,000 tourists who each summer day pour onto Parliament Hill to watch the guard nge, to clamber up the Peace Tower and to stare in awe at the carved wood panelling of the domed parliamentary

For all the good they've been doing, in the name of Pierre Elliot Trudeau or anyone else, these MPs should have been gone long ago.

For months there's been a flatness to this parliament, a sense of motion without reaction, of roles played by rote.

Majority government is the general cause. The certainty of at least four Liberal years following immediately on the excitement of the last, minority, parliament and of last summer's election, has affected MPs of all parties. Their focus has become, not politics, but administration. Even novelty has been lacking Many of the major bills - Petrocan. revisions to the Competition Act, agricul tural stabilization - are hold-overs from the year before.

Untouched Options

From late June onwards the curve produced this mood of lassitude, quite aside from the circumstance that the desk-bound MPs now watched the shirtsleeved tourists and wondered how much of the summer would be left before they could escape to cottages, beaches or to a castle in Spain.

Finance Minister John Turner's budget, whether good or bad in its details, deflated expectations. In the months before that budget he had tried, and failed, to persuade business and labour to ac cept voluntary price and wage restraint. He defined his other anti-inflation options as either to deliberately allow the recession to worsen or to impose price

Came the budget and Turner left all of his options untouched. Canada's economic fortunes now depend upon luck -U.S. recovery and a fall in world commodity prices - or upon a second bud-place rather than any government action will decide our economic future.

The government was attacked for lack of leadership, on the budget and on other issues, yet such criticisms seemed hardly more than minor annovances to a looked more impregnable.

Prime Minister Trudeau has acquired the late Mackenzie King at the height of his powers. Trudeau dominates the civil service, his cabinet, his caucus and the House of Commons, Aides are convinced Trudeau will run again in 1978. Political rvers as much as the prime minister's own aides, are convinced Trudeau will then triumph again, to extend his term in office to 14 years, the longest unbroken span since Sir Wilfred Laurier the turn of the century The best measure of Trudeau's strength is the weakness of his opponents. Early in July the New Democrats elected Ed Broadbent as their new lead-Intelligent and well-intention Broadbent has none of the magic of his

The Conservatives also began their long search for a successor to Robert Stanfield. The early fore-runner, and a candidate hard to beat unless Alberta is Quebec MP Claude Wagner.

Wagner, though, has made no impact on Ottawa. In contrast to Stanfield and to former NDP leader David Lewis, whom Trudeau still beat three times out of three, an opposition team of Wagner and Broadbent will cause few anxieties among the Liberal legions.

Barren of surprise or of drama, the political scenery has set the stage of Parliament. For lack of certainty about its own directions, the opposition, Conservatives in particular, attacked the government not on specific policies but on procedural generalities. Legislative debates were protracted until delay became an end in itself rather than a means to make a point.

Parliament, warned Liberal MP John Reid, is becoming "impotent waste our time on trivia and do not focus on the larger issues of the day." A demoralized opposition and a government under no political pressure to lead (Trudeau will collect the cabinet in mid-September for a one-day think-tank to plot long-term priorities) have combined to produce a parliament innocent even of sound and fury, let alone of substance

Japan's Postwar Growth: Problems of Productivity

TOKYO — Thirty years after the defeat which shattered its economy and reduced its cities to ashes and rubble, Japan has acquired national wealth, productive power and material possessions beyond its former dreams. It has also acquired terrible pollution and overcrowding and slowly gathering sense of dissatisfaction similar to that which afflicts advanced societies of the West.

The postwar economic physical and social change in Japan has been the most rapid of any major nation and in many respects the most surprising. With hardly any raw materials or energy resources, no empire and no substantial miltrary or political power, Japan has become the third most productive nation in the world, behind only the United States and the Soviet Union, and acre for acre by far the most productive patch of earth anywhere. A recent U.S. State Department report called Japan's postwar growth "the wonder of the world."

area and 2.8 per cent of its population, Japan produces half of the world's merchant ships, about a third of the world's radios and television sets, and roughly a sixth of all its crude racios and television sets, and longing a stati of all its crude steel, pig iron, automobiles and synthetic fiber. Japan's total national output is more than five times that of all of Southeast Asia, twice that of China, about the same as that of France and Britain added together, two-thirds of that of the Soviet Union and a third of that of the United States.

First in World

Six of the world's 50 largest industrial companies are Japanese, as well as five of the 10-largest banks outside the United States. Japan's glant trading companies maintain global information and telecommunications networks more accurate and extensive than those of most of the world's gov ernments. The communications network of a single firm, Mitsui & Co., is long enough to circle the earth eight times. Japan's national newspapers are the largest in the world in circulation except for the Soviet Union's Pravda. Tokyo's Dentsu Advertising Agency recently passed J. Walter Thomp-

The east coast industrial belt often seems to be a giant, unadorned factory — mile after mile of dirty grey concrete and rusting steel concealed on bad days by an enveloping pall of photochemical smog.

Because of unplanned and unchecked growth, Japan has been transformed since World War II from 25 million urban people and 50 million rural to 82 million urban people and 38 million rural. Nearly a third of the national population is jammed into the central core of the three metropolitan areas of Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya. Millions are crammed into commuter trains under unspeakable conditions twice daily between their work place and their-living quarters in tiny crackerbox houses or ugly concrete tenements. Only one house in four throughout Japan is attached to sewage systems or septic tanks: three out of four still depend on night-

Although they have acquired many material possessions, better health, a longer life and a far greater knowledge of the world in recent years, the Japanese believe they have also been losing much that is vitally important. Beauty and harmony are among their highest values, yet Japan has become increasingly ugly, polluted, noisy and disharmonious. There is a widespread belief that the head-long pursuit of gross national product has gone too far, too fast, that the nation must change its ways or perish. Particularly since the onset of the oil crisis in late 1973 and the world-wide recession which followed, the Japanese have become conscious of their own vulnerability and obsessed in books, motion pictures, and real-life with various catastrophes, natural or man-made, which could befall this storm-tossed, earthquake-prone chain of islands.

Fascinating, Infuriating

Astonishing Success

Whatever one's view of their rectitude, there is no doubt at all of their diligence of their astonishing success in keeping pace with the world. It took Japan until 1955, about a decade, to reach the per capita income level of the immediate pre-war years. In 1962 — some 17 years after V-J Day — Japan reached the level of GNP that would have been projected by a straight-line extension of pre-war economic trends. By then its high-investment, rapid growth policies and all-out pursuit of economic goals had begun the industrial takeoff that was

During its growth spurt from the mid-1950s until the onset of the oil crisis, Japan's economy grew twice as fast as West Germany or France, about three times as fast as the United States and nearly four times as fast as Britain. In real terms, its industrial production quadrupled in about a decade. By 1972, Japan was either first, second or third in world production of a long and expanding list of commercial and industrial

VICTORIA TIMES, THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1975

A great deal now depends on Japan's reactions as the world economy and its own pull out of the doldrums of the past 18 months. Will Japan change course or will it go back to "doing what comes naturally" despite problems and resistance? In its first period of "zero growth since the Second World War, Japan so far has not headed definitely in a new direction so much as it has paused in its pursuit of the old direction. Still, signs of potential change are many.

Momentous Turning Point

The subtitle of the government's annual economic white The subtitle of the government's annual economic white paper for last year was "Beyond the Growth Economy." The text explained that "the Japanese economy is without doubt coming to a momentous turning point. It is now called upon to cut open a new path for a shift from quantitative expansion to qualitative improvement and from an economy of material growth to an economy of rich humanity." These are still mere words, but such underpinnings are vitally important in a country bullt on consensus. Toshio Doko, chairman of Japan's powerful big business federation (Keidanren) put the case for change in a more hard-headed way by saying that "the present difficulties in paying for energy imports may do more to aid the economic restructuring of Japan than all the social pressures put together."

If either of those estimates is correct Japan is basided.

If either of those estimates is correct, Japan is headed into a new phase of its post-war history — beyond the "growth spurt" to something more acceptable to itself and, in the long run, to the world.

A Stranger in Paradise -Why Victoria Is Unique

The following is one of a series of guest pieces written for the holidaying Allan Fotheringham, senior editor and colum-

It's awful when a person goes through life so misunder-stood, as my wife keeps telling me, but, gosh, when a whole city confronts the same fate even mass psychoanalysis may

True, I only adopted Victoria as my home town a half dozen years ago which, in Victoria, is like coming the day before yesterday, but I never cease to be perplexed by the way we're viewed by Vancouverites.

You'd think that a great city, so near that, on clear nights, we can see the reflection of its lights on its layer of pollution, would have more awareness of what makes Victoria creep. But, no, five yet to meet a Vancouverite who didn't see us as a sort of Disneyland.

They cling to the myth that we're a little bit of olde England, which we ain't. They call us quaint, charming, the city of flowers, gracious living, lavender and old lace, the sleepy hollow of the west. It sometimes makes you wonder if the novelist. Ethel Wilson, wasn't right when she observed that, to a visitor, there is no such place as Victoria, only a state of mind.

sence of the place which, distilled, is the simple, determined, sometimes fanatical, resolution of the inhabitants to resist

Alone among Canadian cities, Victoria remains implacably against change or, in any event, change that will intrude on the quality of life, this is not a consensus decision made by committee, you understand, but arrived at by a process of osmosis. The Victorian is a 19th Century Man, trying for the 18th. The result, of course, is that it is practically the only intributed historial solutions. civilized, liveable place in the country,

* * * Some of the lunacy of the outside world filters in from time to time. Our rape, armed robbery and breaking-and-entering statistics are higher this year. But Victorians resist such incursions in their own way. It seemed to me typically Victorian when a certain restaurant-owner, trying to keep up with frenetic pace across the straits, advertised "Almost topless waitresses," a compromise I now hear he has wisely

Victorians are less interested in the crime statistics than they are in the statistics which more accurately reflect their

When I looked in the Victoria Times library for some figures which might reflect the city's industrial base I found very little, mainly because we have no industrial base to speak of. But there were all sorts of surveys and charts on the more important things. In no time at all I learned that seven out of 10 Victorians, asked to name their favorite recognition, listed walkings of the control li reation, listed walking and gardening, eight out of 10 had not been to a dance, party or movie in the past week, only eight percent admitted to being "not too happy" and 34 per cent were glad to say they were "very happy." You wouldn't want to rock that boat, would you? Victorians seldom do.

In my own six years of writing a column here, I've found that Victorians are remarkably phlegmatic about issues that, in Vancouyer, might have your secretary announcing that there was a man with a horse-whip waiting to see you.

Yet Victorians get very upset about even a sensible advocacy of high-rise apartments ("What? Spoil somebody's view?") or the razing of a single boulevard oak or, indeed, any kind of alteration in the way things are. It is still something of a scandal in Victoria that the old Empress should have paved over, for a parking lot, the gardens which used to be out back.

It's characteristic, too, that civic leaders are forever urging the analgamation of Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich to make a nice little compact city of maybe 250,000, thus ending a truly nutty and costly balkanization, but nothing ever happens. That would be change. Why change paradise?

That it is a paradise, as cities go, is readily apparent to an adopted son who has lived in Toronto and in Vancouver and who may marvel at his own blind wisdom in selecting a place who may marver at his own bind wisdom in selecting a piace where the pace is fully half a step slower, where the tensions and irritations and senseless competion of "progressive" cities may seem a kind of death wish. (I remember my wife, after living in the fury of Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, London and Toronto, sitting in Bastion Square on the day we became Victorians, turning to me with absolute delight and saying. "Do you realize we're the youngest people in sight?" My theory about why this place should be so remote from

I believe it comes down to the fact that Victorians, perhaps alone in this nation, are totally reliant on each other. As I say, we make almost nothing and so the aggressive hard-sell or the so-called free enterprise initiative rarely surfaces. The population consists largely of the armed forces, who don't seem to do much though they're very unobtrusive about it, the civil service, who do as little as possible, the old, retired folks from all over Canada and the United States, who mostly just sif, the summer-time fourists and the precise who mostly just sit, the summer-time tourists and the people who feed and service them. Somebody has described it as the one

Oh, the place has problems. What city doesn't? It's a terrible town for an ambitious young man or woman unless they're content to sacrifice their talent and education (some do—the clerk who sold me a shirt at Eaton's last week was a graduate with honors in oceanography.) It is growing much too fast, largely due to the retired population who come, by word of mouth in increasing number of the content of the c word of mouth, in increasing numbers and threaten one day to make it a giant geriatric ward (one survey of 400-odd suites in Oak Bay showed the average age of the tenants to be 70). The city and the surrounding municipalities are desperate for revenue in a scenic triangle where the householder must pay most of the bills. The hospitals are overcrowded. The housing is inadequate and expensive.

Yet the Victoria that so few Vancouverites know, this city of serene, unhurried, lotus-eating, independent, individualists of "virtuous materialism," as some snide person has Still come to think of it, maybe its just as well you Van-ouverites don't know about it. If you did we might have you all here, ruining the place with progress.

Bond Market Prices Soften

By AL FORREST Times Finance Editor
The market for bonds has been adversely affected by the renewed upward surge of inflation this summer. Bond prices have gone soft in both Canada and the United States.

Only one private company chose to share the market with the $400 million Canadian bond issue. Ford Motor Credit Co. Ltd. of Canada sold $50 million retractible debentures at par, yielding 10.25 per cent for 5½ years and 10.75 per cent after that to 1995. Meanwhile, the latest signs rate of inflation across North America. Good prices rose 3 per cent in the 30 days ended July 15 in the U.S. for an annual rate of 36 per cent.

Canadian food prices are increasing at about half that rate, according to the early s u m m e r trend, although sharp increases for coffee and an new round of price hikes for sugar have not yet been reflected in the statistics.

Canadian pay increases are escalating. Settlements in the second quarter are averaging 18.8 per cent per year, up from 16.9 per cent in the first quarter.

In the U.S., the treasury raised $1 billion in new cash in a single week and there were predictions the federal deficit could reach $88 billion by next March, instead of $60 billion as forecest earlier. billion as forecast earlier.

There was some easing in Canada in the volume of loans but this was counterbalanced by a tendency to pull money out of deposit accounts to meet large expenses.

The present rate of inflation probably is 11 per cent.
The last firm reading was at the end of May when the rate for the preceedig 12 months was 10.8 per cent and rising.

For example, the rate of inflation for the three months ended May 31 was 7.4 per cent per year while the rate per year for the three months ended June 30 was 8.7 per cent

July and August figures are expected to show a return to double digit inflation. Until the inflation stresses ease, the bond market is expected to remain weak.

An indictment returned by a chael Foot told the House of Commons that under the temporary employment subsidy plan the government subsidy for themselves.

Employment Secretary Miachael Foot told the House of Commons that under the temporary employment subsidy plan the government will pay 10 pounds, or $22, each week for each deferred dismissal of a full-time worker.

The subsidy plan, due to start Aug. 18, will cover all employment in the private sector of industry and commerce in government-designated "assisted, areas" such as the hard-hit western and northeastern England, and Scotland.

If half the climbs of the foot said the plan is "intended to alleviate some of the effects of high unemployment in the worst hit areas by providing for a short-term subsidy to be offered to firms which are prepared to defer planned redundancies."

The subsidy will be payable in each case for three months and may be extended for a further and final three months, he added.

The Kingdome: Seattle's Multi-Purpose Facility

SEATTLE - First of all the contrast was just too obvious to ignore. It comes under the general heading of natio shame.

For here in the great Pacific Northwest, in the largest U.S. city west of St. Louis and north of San Francisco, is a facility that is a joy to behold. Here is a multi-purpose, all weather, domed stadium, that will seat 65,000 for football, 60,000 for baseball, 80,000 for other events, is rapidly nearing completion, is scheduled to open in March, 1976, and at a cost lower than any other domed stadium ever.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, site of the '76 Olympics, there is a stadium, multi-purpose, domed (with sliding roof), designed for all seasons, will seat 70,000 for football, 65,000 for baseball, is destined to be ready in July...and...

Note the similarities. Now the cost. Seattle? $60 million, Firm. Montreal? $284 million, and climbing. Obviously one is more exotic than the other. But how exotic can you get for a difference of $224 million? In Seattle, the key word is functional. In Montreal...who knows...until we get

However, politics and the shame of it all aside, this was tour day at the Kingdome, new home of the Seattle Seahawks of the National Football League, an expected franchise in the major leagues, perhaps the Sounders of the North American Soccer League, and site of industrial, trade and personality

Johnny O'Brian, former Seattle University basketball star, later a major league infielder at Pittsburgh, was the host. He the administrative assistant to stadium director Ted Bowsfield who may be recalled as a Penticton boy who was signed by scout Earl Johnson of Seattle in the 50s, and eventually made good as a left-handed pitcher with Boston, Kansas City and California in the majors.

Actually, the stadium looks bigger from the inside than out and of course it's big enough for major sports. The floor space encompasses 150,000 square feet. The diameter of the building is 720 feet, and it rises to a height of 250 feet in the center at its highest point. The baseball field measures 325 feet down each foul line, 375 feet to left-centre and right-centre field and 410 feet to dead centre.

The Seahawks will be the first professional team to use the Stadium, the Seattle entry in the NFL having 10 games scheduled next fall. The annual NFL Pro Bowl is scheduled structure, that claim seems legitimate enough.

Bowsfield, who spent several years with the Angels as operations manager at Anaheim, Calif., is realistic enough that he can't see the stadium turning a profit for at least three years. "I like to think five-year plan," he said, "but we have projected that we will schedule 140 events a year by 1978. And if all works well, maybe that could be our break-even time. Or thereafter. Certainly we will know better then then use do easy."

then than we do now."

"And, oh, yes," he added, "I am fully aware that domed stadiums don't show a profit. Or haven't yet."

So maybe the Stadaum is true. Only time will tell, or the profit and loss statement. Because Kingdome did have its problems and growing pains. The Seattle voters rejected such a plan in 1960 and again in 1966. But in 1968 with the promise of an American League football franchise, the vote was swung and a $40 million bond issue authorized.

Then troubles. The Seattle Pilots lasted only one year and were no ball-of-fire. Stadium plans were staggered. The site was changed. Anti-stadium litigation followed, and all was was changed. American Hoganian and a county executive John Spellman finally gave stadium construction the green light. And the feeling of some residents was evident at the sod-turning when Spellman was pelled with mudballs by spectators. There followed other labor problems, a scandal of sorts, more litigation, spiralling costs, a dispute with the contractor and Happily now, though, everything has been resolved and work on the structure is racing ahead so quickly that already the first booking has been made. The Billy Graham Crusade will baptise the building in May of 1976.

Bowsfield says he is absolutely amazed at the response from the citizens to the Kingdome, and particularly to the first offering of football season tickets.

"The very first day, there were 32,000 applications processed," he said. That figure had jumped to 40,000 on Tuesday of this week. Now team officials are worrying about

"This is all the more remarkable," said Bowsfield, "when it is considered that the Seahawks don't even have a home practice field, don't have a coach, don't have any players,

Mark Duncan, assistant general manager of the Seahawks, later said he thought it would be about a $12 top dropping to $8. "Other points in the Northwest won't be forgotten when it comes to tickets," said Bowsfield. "We plan to have a computerized ticket program with an outlet in Vancouver."

'After all, that's where some of the applications came from.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In retrospect today's deal is not a difficult one to play cor-rectly. But when the hand came up in real life, our declarer missed the key play at trick one — and after that there could be no recovery. The deal was played in a rubber-bridge game. Both sides vulnerable. West

The bidding was quite good, with West's five-heart bid being made as a sacrifice against a four-spade contract that West felt would be ful-filled (at five hearts West would have gone down only one trick, losing two diamonds and one spade).

After West's opening lead of the heart king had been ruffed by South, a low trump was led to dummy's king, gathering in the two adversely held trumps. Next came the ace and king of diamonds, would be caught. When this card failed to drop, the jack of diamonds was led. East captured this trick with the queen, and led a club. The de-fenders then cashed two club tricks, and declarer was down

From the very beginning it should have been apparent to declarer that the danger to his contract lay in East's prohis contract lay in East's pro-curement of the lead, for a club lead by East would re-sult in the entrapment of South's king (West, for his opening bid, figured to have the ace of clubs). Therefore South's play should have been directed towards keeping East out of the lead.

What declarer should have what declarer should have done at trick one was to have allowed West's king of hearts to have won the trick, discarding thereon his deuce of diamonds. Assuming that West would have then continued with the heart acc detinued with the heart ace, de-clarer would have ruffed. Next would come a trump to dummy's king, after which the ace and king of diamonds would be cashed. With both opponents following suit, the contract would now be in the bag, regardless of which of them possessed the diamond

A third diamond lead would then be made, East following with the queen and South ruffwith the queen and south run-ing. Dummy would now be re-entered via a trump and on the established jack and ten of diamonds South would dis-card his nine and king of

Thus by playing the hand as recommended, South would end up not only by making his contract, but with an over-trick as his "bonus."

Cooks, trying to save time and energy, are well advised to avoid recipes that call for individual preparations as op-posed to a platter (it takes longer to clean and stuff eight separate tomatoes with tuna or chicken salad than to surround the salad with lettuce and slices of tomato.) They should beware, as well, of recipes that are advertised as quick, yet require extensive preparation.

This is the failing of most "from scratch" recipes. Peeling, slicing and chopping are second nature to the restaurant chef or cordon bleu cook. For the sometime-cook who lacks a mechanical food chopper, a "little" mixed vegetable base for a stock or soup, often strained out and thrown high quality, juicy, sweet, tender corn. To bite into corn dripping with butter and find it tough and tasteless is a big sappointment. To avoid such a let-down, when you buy corn, look for these signs of quality: kernels that are plump, but not too large which cover the cob well: husks that look fresh and are bright green — not dried or yellow. Check the silk ends to make sure they are free from decay or worm injury. Buy as freshly as pos-sible or from refrigerated storage. Refrigerate immediately with the husks on, until ready to use. If you keep it too long, the sugar in the plump kernels starts to turn to starch and you lose the ten-

Fruits, Vegetables in a Pickle

The season for fruits and vegetables is also the season for pickles; these summer sweetmeats in a jar will liven up any winter meal.

Pickles are preserved fruits and vegetables in spiced or flavored vinegar. They are made of a mixture of cucum-bers and whole or pieces of pickles, cauliflower flowerets, small onions soaked in a brine solution and marinated in vinsolution and marinated in vinhave a red or green tomato base, to which may be added finely chopped fruits or vege-cloudiness will occur in the brine or in the pickle mixture if the proportion of salt is high. Vegetables may require soaking in brine. To make the brine, use the precise amounts of salt. If not enough salt is used, pickles will be soft or slippery; if too much salt is used, they may shrivel and become tough.

Use good quality vinegar, preferably full strength. If the vinegar is too weak or dilute, the pickles will be soft and may not keep. There are four may not keep. There are four kinds of vinegar sold: white, cider, blended and malt. White vinegar gives better color where light colored foods such as onions, ripe cucumbers or pears are used salt is best. cumbers or pears are used. Cider or malt vinegar are used to impart a special fla-vor. Blended vinegar is usual-vinegar.

Spices should be bought fresh each year since they tend to lose flavor if stored too long. Spices should be used with caution and should always be measured level. A dark color or bitter flavor may result from using too much spice, or from boiling the spice too long with the vinegar, Furthermore, whole spices give better color and flavor than ground spices. Whole spices should be tied loosely, in a cheesecloth bag.

In making pickles, use enamel, aluminum or stain-less steel cooking utensils. Since vinegar and salt react with iron, copper and brass, causing discoloration, utensils made of these metals should clean jars or crocks. Containers must be sterilized except when used for pickles which have a high concentration of vinegar and sugar. Along with this information,

MACARONI AND CHEESE WITH A DIFFERENCE

By MARY MOORE

The Food Prices Review Board discovered a number of things common to all Canadians. An average four-person family in Canada now spending $2,900 a year for food could spend a third less and still receive all necessary nutrients.

Heeding these findings of Mrs. Plumptre's staff I made a macaromi and cheese dish that we all enjoyed — so much so that one of my dietitan guests said that if she had a family of six to feed she and two friends wanted to do something about the canning lid shortage. Now they regret they ever bothered.

"I wish I had never opened my mouth,"
Mrs. Baron said. "It was just terrible." Mrs. Baron's anguish began when she volunteered to help Kirsten Felton take orders for canning lids.

Mrs. Felton thought that if she started a consumer's co-op she would have a better chance of getting the scarce lids for the 8,500 residents of this southwestern Pennsylvania community. The idea was to submit a bulk order directly to a manufacturer.

What she didn't anticipate was the re-continuously for two hours before she finally got through to me."

Mrs. Felton originally figured she'd get maybe a thousand orders for canning lid boxes, each containing 12 lids.

"It snowballed beyond expectations," said Marie Brant, another volunteer.

The deadline was Friday - but the phone calls keep coming in.

"My phone rang and rang and rang Saturday and again Sunday," Miss Brant said. "I finally told them to call Mrs. Felton." The women have refused any more orders. They haven't had time to count up the ones they already have, but they estimate they could have orders for as many as 16,000 canning lid boxes — or nearly 200,000

HONOLULU - A Hawaiian vacation ends tonight for the three Apollo astronauts who have been given a tentative clean bill of health in their-recovery from breathing poison rocket gas two weeks ago. Astronauts Vance Brand, Thomas Stafford and Donald Slav ton will meet reporters in Washington, D.C., Saturday to discuss details of the mishap in the ;command module as they returned to earth from the Apollo-Soyuz mission July

JEFFERSON, N.H. — Artist Pastor Martelino Jr.'s 15-foot, 30-pound musical, flying, aluminium structure got away from him last week and it may become the first work of art to solo the Atlantic. If the air force doesn't shoot it down first. Martelino's work, appropriately balled Air-bourne Won, got away from him at the White Mountain art festival and hasn't been seen since. Air force sources say by now it could be over the Atlantic and have threatened to shoot it down if it becomes a hazard. The sculpture, attached to a 55-foot he-lium balloon, is designed with scoops to guide air through a

'Amoral Moms' Breeding Criminals

LOS ANGELES—Women's liberation has brought the U.S. to the verge of "a crime wave like the world has never seen before" wave like the world has never seen before" because neglectful and amoral mothers are breeding a generation of savages and sociopaths; says police chief Edward Davis.

"You ain't seen nothing yet," Davis said Wednesday of increases in street crime.
"You may need a bomb shelter to go to" in the future.

"Just think of the liberated woman who wants to act like husbands are supposed to and 18 per cent increase in crime now is going to go up so that it's going to shock hell out of you."

A child is formed in the first five years, and whether he's going to become a criminal sociopath . . . is predicated on what goes into his mind before he goes to school. "If you don't have love and culture in the home you're going to be some kind of living savage," Davis said.

Davis spoke to a mostly receptive audience of middle-aged couples at the Breakfast

He said crime "is going to go up and up and up" because of the breakdown in traditional motherhood and "the new morality which condones lying, stealing and killing . . . a philosophic concept that has penetrated everyone who has gone to a university.

and the Delicate Balance Water of plants, so necessary this year, has not been nearly so monotonous as some gardeners imply.

The extra time spent on this work has yielded side benefits, one of which is the opporunity to observe at close range not only the progress of the plants but also the reac-tion of insects and other creatures of our environment to the presence of water.

A little advance planning in early spring has certainly-helped with the watering. To-matoes and squash were grouped in a shelfered area to themselves because no over-head watering is permissible once the first blooms open. This area is watered by laying an open-end hose at the root of each plant, with the tap set for a light trickle that will sink deeply but not run over the surface.

In my soil it takes about 30 to 45 minutes on each root area, and this is necessary once in every seven days.

The "early sowings" and "long - season" area is separate and is watered overhead with a revolving sprinkler and a pulsating standard as growth increases in height, again on a seven-day sched-

The third area, removed from the other two, has the mid-July sowings which will fill the vegetable needs from mid - September until Christ-

Since it is a waste of water to saturate the soil in which no useful plants are growing, each seed row has been watered by hand once in seven days, taking six trips along each row until the water starts to "puddle" on the surface.

surface.

Onions and garlic are always planted in a place where the roots will not obtain any moisture from other areas during the bulb-ripening period from mid-July on.

It is the third area with the mid-July sowings that is most interesting. On the first trip down the rows there is a mighty exodus of ants, spiders, and earwigs, mainly a scurry for shelter from the

They return immediately the deluge has passed, gathering in motley groups to obtain their reach. Their need for water is so great, the presence of an aggressor is unno-

A few minutes after water ing is started the mud-wasps appear from nowhere. They alight on the damp soil and move around rapidly until they locate a suitable spot for gathering the mud with which to build their nests.

Balancing on their front legs, they frantically scrape up mud with the back legs, press it into a ball, then fly away like a helicopter with a load of freight hanging be-neath their bodies.

Other wasps fly in, large and small, including the yellow-jacket, and gather around any wet spot to drink their fill. These wasps are interestee in water to drink, not mud for a nest.

Flies of all sizes swarm in, together with butterflies and moths, lighting on the foliage to drink from beads of water. Then you notice sparrows. starlings, crows, wren-tits, chickadees, and robins move away. They drop quietly to puddles and wet foliage to quench their thirst.

The neighborhood cats do not wait for watering day, they know where to find the watering can which is always left filled, and the amount of water 10 cats can drink in a day is amazing. When the can is nearly drained they start on the lily-pool.

Noticing these comings and goings you realize that water is just as important to the smallest insects as it is to humans. As a result of the lack of rain, the insects are going to succulent plants and the birds to juicy fruits. Even earwigs are swarming into suit of the swarming into succeeding their spatial researches to current their spatial researches to current their split peaches to quench their thirst.

The gardener can prevent much damage to plants and fruits by placing shallow containers of water between plants and in the lower branches of trees.

It is much easier to fill the containers than it is to fight the insects and birds. And it doesn't upset the delicate balance which is so important to both soil and crops.

Blood-Soaked End to a Romance started as a high school romance ended here in a blood-soaked field this week as a man who was to face kidnapping charges this fall abducted the same girl and shot her to death before taking his own life.

The bodies of Debra Kocon, 16, and Keith

Sartorius, 20, both of High Prairie, were spotted by police surveillance aircraft at 6:15 a,m. Tuesday, more than three hours after she had been taken at gunpoint from the home of friends.

"He was one of her ex-boyfriends," said Mrs. Mona Kocon, the dead girl's mother.
"I don't think love was involved... but I'll never know. Debbie's not here to tell me.

"It was the second time she had been taken away," she said. "The first time was on July 2 when she was going to work.
"He held her hostage for 6½ hours after he took her away. He had a revolver and he

Haggerty said he was apprehended "in a field north of High Prairie when a large number of us approached and told him to put down his gun."

Sartorius was charged and released on $2,000 bail with the condition that he stay out of High Prairie and not get in touch with Miss Kocon.

But on Monday, he borrowed his parents car and drove from their home in the Slave Lake area to High Prairie.

"Debbie said she had seen him on Monday," said Mrs. Kocon. "She phoned police and told them."

Haggerty confirmed that Miss Kocon reported Sartorius' appearance in town but, adding he was there to appear in court on a charge laid for possession of stolen radio

"He left town after his court appearance," said Haggerty, but returned shortly after and broke into a home his parents kept in High Prairie, taking a .30-.30 rifle and 60 rounds of ammunition.

He also left a suicide note, the details of which have not been released.

"On Monday night, he phoned the friends' nome where Debbie was staying," said Mrs.

"He pretended he was one of the 'consta-bles here. He told them to stay where they were, that there looked-like there was going to be trouble.

"He went over to the house right away, broke in the doors and took her from the house. There was a woman and three children there . . . Debbie didn't want them hurt. She was very brave. She went with him.

"He had the rifle with him and they were getting into the car when the police came. I don't know why they didn't shoot then. They should have known he wouldn't give her another chance."

Meeting Slated On Chile

OTTAWA (CP) - Immigrahas agreed to meet represent-atives of the Inter-Church Committee on Chile, a group highly critical of federal government policy toward that country. The committee says that systematic and gross violations of human rights are still taking place in Chile. It also says 18,000 refugees in neighboring Argentina are being increasingly harassed by Argentine authorities.

It has asked that Ottawa adopt a policy of "evident dip-lomatic coolness" to the Chi-lean military junta and that immigration requirements for Chilean refugees be eased.

Andras has given no com-mitment, saying that his department operates on a global priority system and there are urgent situations in other parts of the world. Canada's responses to the refugee situations of both Chile and Vietnam reflect well on the country, Andras says, and were "designed solely to alleviate human distress without regard to po-litical or other consider-ations."

The Inter-Church Committhe recently protested Canada's decision to renegotiate its $19,073,000 share of the Chilean external debt. This decision was made jointly with most of Chile's other major creditors, known as the Paris Club.

However, Britain refused to take part in the renegotiation because of the human rights

A Stranger in Paradise -Why Victoria Is Unique

The following is one of a series of guest pieces written for the holidaying Allan Fotheringham, senior editor and colum-nist for the Vancouver Sun.

It's awful when a person goes through life so misunder-stood, as my wife keeps telling me, but, gosh, when a whole city confronts the same fate even mass psychoanalysis may

True, I only adopted Victoria as my home town a half dozen years ago which, in Victoria, is like coming the day before yesterday, but I never cease to be perplexed by the way we're viewed by Vancouverites. You'd think that a great city, so near that, on clear nights, we can see the reflection of its lights on its layer of pollution, would have more awareness of what makes Victoria creep. But, no, I've yet to meet a Vancouverite who didn't see as a sort of Disneyland.

They cling to the myth that we're a little bit of olde England, which we ain't. They call us quaint, charming, the city of flowers, gracious living, lavender and old lace, the sleepy hollow of the west. It sometimes makes you wonder if the novelist, Ethel Wilson, wasn't right when she observed that, to a visitor, there is no such place as Victoria, only a

What Vancouverites always seem to miss is the real essence of the place which, distilled, is the simple, determined, sometimes fanatical, resolution of the inhabitants to resist against change or, in any event, change that will intrude on the quality of life, this is not a consensus decision made by committee, you understand, but arrived at by a process of osmosis. The Victorian is a 19th Century Man, trying for the 18th. The result, of course, is that it is practically the only civilized, liveable place in the country.

Some of the lunacy of the outside world filters in from time to time. Our rape, armed robbery and breaking-and-entering statistics are higher this year. But Victorians resist such incursions in their own way. It seemed to me typically Victorian when a certain restaurant-owner, trying to keep up with frenetic pace across the strafts, advertised "Almost topless waitresses," a compromise I now hear he has wisely

Victorians are less interested in the crime statistics than they are in the statistics which more accurately reflect their

When I looked in the Victoria Times library for some fig ures which might reflect the city's industrial base I found very little, mainly because we have no industrial base to speak of. But there were all sorts of surveys and charts on the more important things. In no time at all I learned that seven out of 10 Victorians, asked to name their favorite recbeen to a dance, party or movie in the past week, only eight percent admitted to being "not too happy" and 34 per cent were glad to say they were "very happy." You wouldn't want to rock that boat, would you? Victorians seldom do.

In my own six years of writing a column here, I've found that Victorians are remarkably phlegmatic about issues that, in Vancouver, might have your secretary announcing that there was a man with a horse-whip waiting to see you.

Yet Victorians get very upset about even a sensible advocacy of high-rise apartments ("What? Spoil somebody's view?") or the razing of a single boulevard oak or, indeed, any kind of alteration in the way things are. It is still something of a scandal in Victoria that the old Empress should have available to a partial left the condensation. have paved over, for a parking lot, the gardens which used to

It's characteristic, too, that civic leaders are forever urging the amalgamation of Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich to make a nice little compact city of maybe 250,000 h thus ending a truly nutty and costly balkanization, but nothing ever happens. That would be change. Why change para-

That it is a paradise, as cities go, is readily apparent to an adopted son who has lived in Toronto and in Vancouver and who may marvel at his own blind wisdom in selecting a place where the pace is fully half a step slower, where the tensions and irritations and senseless competion of "progressive" cities may seem a kind of death wish. (I remember my wife, after-hving in the fury of Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Airess London and Toronto, sitting in Bastion Square on the day we became Victorians, turning to me with absolute delight and saying, "Do you realize we're the youngest people in sight?"

My theory about why this place should be so remote from life's rat-race, why the people should be so hospitable, courteous and beautifully relaxed, is a simple one. I believe it comes down to the fact that Victorians, perbaps alone in this nation, are totally reliant on each other. As I say, we make almost nothing and so the aggressive hard-sell or the so-called free enterprise initiative rarely surfaces. The population consists largely of the armed forces, who don't seem to do much though they're very unobtrusive mostly just sit, the summer-time tourists and the people who feed and service them. Somebody has described it as the one city in Canada in which only the people matter. That may

'Oh, the place has problems. What city doesn't? It's a terrible town for an ambitious young man or woman unless they're content to sacrifice their talent and education (some do-the clerk who sold me a shirt at Eaton's last week was a graduate with honors in oceanography.) It is growing much too fast, largely due to the retired population who come, by word of mouth, in increasing numbers and threaten one day to make it a giant geriatric ward (one survey of 400-odd suites in Oak Bay showed the average age of the tenants to be 70). The city and the surrounding municipalities are desperate for revenue in a scenic triangle where the householder must pay most of the bills. The hospitals are over-converites don't know about it. If you did we might have you all-here, ruining the place with progress.

Yet the Victoria that so few Vancouverites know, this city of serene, unhurried, lotus-eating, independent, individualists

CHICAGO (AP) farm commodity futures adlimits on the Board of Trade on Thursday.

The demand that lifted prices to limits was influenced by trade reports that the drought of recent weeks in some sections of the Middle West might reduce the corn yields this year. There also was some concern over re-ports from Europe that more countries are involved with small grain production prob-lems this year because of a lack of moisture. In addition. Canada's drought reportedly necessitated new export controls on grains.

On those factors, soybean and wheat futures rose the limit of 20 cents a bushel. Other limits included 10 cents in corn, six cents in oats and 100 points, or one cent a pound, in soybean oil. Soy-bean meal advanced $6 a ton.

Gold futures closed about steady after profit-taking had reduced a gain of about $1 an

Both Hampson and D. C. Morrison, CDC executive-vicepresident, said an aim of the planned issue is the widest possible distribution of the Canadian public.

Sales of CDC shares through the banks was part of the original plan by CDC for distribution of its stock.

In April, 1974, the Ontario Securities Commission ruled that chartered banks would be permitted to accept expressions of interest and orders for shares of CDC, but it prohibited them from recommending CDC shares or soliciting orders.

The OSC said potential problems would be raised if the banks were to solicit di-rectly the purchase of securities by banking customers through persons "who while having many admirable qualities, are not qualified as sebrokers."

It said Banks do not hold themselves out as brokers, investment dealers or investment advisers and there is no evidence that they seek this

Corn (basis Montreal)

CHICAGO (AP) - Most farm commodity futures advanced to allowable daily limits on the Board of Trade on Thursday.

The demand that lifted prices to limits was in-fluenced by trade reports that the drought of recent weeks in some sections of the Middle West might reduce the corn yields this year. There also was some concern over re-ports from Europe that more countries are involved with small grain production prob-lems this year because of a lack of moisture. In addition, Canada's drought reportedly necessitated new export con-trols on grains.

trols on grains. On those factors, soybean and wheat futures rose the limit of 20 cents a bushel. Other limits included 10 cents. oner limits ancluded 10 cents in corn, six cents in oats and 109 points, or one cent apound, in soybean oil. Soybean meal advanced $6 a ton.

Gold futures closed about steady after profit-taking had reduced a gain of about $1 and opening in the soybean and soybean oil pits and minutes later in corn and oats. Some trade developed shortly afterward when local professionals took profits and several times until the close prices hit the Volume: top again.

In the closing minutes, a strong buying move lifted prices in all the major pits as sellers backed off. At the close, soybeans were Radio Shack began on April 20, 1970, with one store, in Revdale. Ont We now have over 300. The demand for our products is growing so rapidly, we're having a hard fime keeping up; but we're doing it! Our biggest problem, right now is a shortage of store managers. Most of our stores are operated on a low-investment joint venture basis. INTERESTED?
